Nantea Dance Company is a Tanzanian-based non-profit contemporary dance company founded in 2015. It provides multifaceted performances and community-based projects and aims to contribute to promoting and developing the Tanzanian dance scene and inspire youths to become ambassadors of growth and social change. The company's goal is to make high-quality dance work and to build a culture where art has its own value.

Samwel Japhet is a Tanzanian dance artist, choreographer, and social entrepreneur who found his voice through dance after a rough childhood of homelessness and abuse. He works at the intersection of dance, storytelling, and social issues, using movement as a tool for artistic expression, storytelling, and an invitation to transcendence and critical reflection on social and political realities.

Tanzanian artist Tadhi Alawi is a dancer, movement researcher and choreographer. After honing his skills and gaining recognition in the local dance scene, Tadhi decided to take his career to the next step after graduating three years diploma of dance at the MUDA Africa Dance School.
